Shoma Nahar, a Bangladeshi mother of three children is graduating on June 17th from CUNY LaGuardia Community College with a 3.8 GPA and has been admitted to New York University with a Community College Transfer Opportunity program scholarship.

She completed her associate degree at LaGuardia Community College and plans to study social work at New York University.

In the future, Shoma wants to work with victims of domestic violence.

Shoma came to America in 1989 as a young bride. She has two sons, Shophen (age 30) and Sabiq (age 19), and a daughter, Sandra (age 28).

Shoma first went to LaGuardia to earn her high school diploma.

Shoma had to overcome many struggles along her journey. Shoma’s story is one that many can learn from—she is an inspiration. Her story shows that LaGuardia can be a safe place for immigrants like her.
